Roosevelt-DuPont Rites Will Unite 3 Famous Families

De LaNoyes (Delanos) and DuPonts Came Originally From France

IN U. S. SINCE 1787

Delanos, Shippers; Roosevelts, Merchants; DuPonts, Powder Men

Two old and powerful American "clans," alike in social prestige but far apart in political philosophy, will be joined with the marriage of Ethel du Pont and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

In a series of three stories, Sigrid Arne explains that the "news" in this betrothal is not that the du Ponts and the Roosevelts are coming together, but that it took them so long.

By SIGRID ARNE
Copyright, 1936, by The Associated Press

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Handsome, young Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., is seen helping the beautiful Ethel du Pont into a car. He smiles her to a football game. He swings her around the floor at a college dance.

And the gossip loves it.

"What do you suppose their families think?" they buzz.

They remember the warring of the du Pont clan on the New Deal.

"Imagine a du Pont marrying a Roosevelt!"

So goes the refrain since Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont announced the engagement of their daughter to the son and namesake of the President.

But the real surprise is not that a du Pont plans to marry a Roosevelt in June, but that the two clans never were united by marriage before.

The two families have long, romantic histories, their paths have crossed before, and they have been powerful for generations.

Of Ancient Lineage

It is even possible that before the French revolution the du Ponts knew of the Delanos, the President's family on his mother's side. In the turmoil leading to the revolution the Delanos, who were known as the De La Noyes, and the du Ponts were active in Huguenot circles in France.

When Victor du Pont made an exploratory trip up the Hudson to Albany in 1787, the Roosevelts and Delanos were already well-known around New York.

All three families have been prolific. All three have taken a warm interest in their communities. Each has a home about which the clan revolves. Both the Roosevelts and the du Ponts are Episcopalians; both have old churches in which ceremonies have marked the christenings, marriages and deaths for generations. The du Ponts are now in their eighth generation on American soil, the Roosevelts in their tenth.

Like Father, Like Son

In the three clans have been all manner of professional men, politicians, merchants and sea-going men. But each family has a special aptitude which has engaged a majority of its men. The Delanos have been predominantly shippers, the Roosevelts merchants; the du Ponts have stayed close to their original gun-powder mills.

Among the Roosevelts and the du Ponts the interests of the first generation have persisted to the present. The Roosevelts still are tight to salt boats almost as soon as they can spell the name. The young du Ponts grow up knowing that they will be expected to take their place in the great corporation which has developed from their ancestors' original black powder mills, which still stand on the Brandywine river near the homes of the clan.

The Roosevelts have sent two Presidents to Washington. The du Ponts have been represented by a senator, Coleman, elected in 1924, and a son-in-law, Rep. Colgate Burden, Jr., who was in the house from Virginia last session.

Marriages Within Clans

Both clans have been so large and self-sufficient that there has been much intermarrying. In the present generation of adults, the President is a distant cousin of his wife, and Irene du Pont, a distant cousin of the bride-to-be, is married to his distant cousin Irene du Pont. Divorces have been almost unheard of until recently.

First of the three families to arrive on American soil was Philippe De La

Social Security Information May Bolster Amendment Plans

Government Likely to Lay Groundwork for Action If Supreme Court Holds Act Is Unconstitutional

WASHINGTON—There is talk here that the social security board has been building up substantial support for a constitutional amendment in event the supreme court throws out the retirement and unemployment features.

Without doubt every workman, be he eligible under the act or not, must by now know what the act promises in monthly pay after age 65.

The big show of telling the public what the social security act involved began with a demonstration of postal efficiency. Amidst the thousands of postal carriers completed in about six hours the task of providing every employer of eight or more the stock of forms and literature for registering the eligibles.

Worker Now Educated

During the campaign there was a great deal about what the social security program would cost the individual worker in taxes. That, sponsors of the plan insisted, was badly misleading for the benefits were overlooked.

In the leaflets handed to each registering workman was a full explanation of what retirement pay he could expect if he earned such and such amount weekly. Not until this was made clear was the tax explained.

One part of the pamphlet listed just what employees could not share in the insurance—farm hands, domestics, and the like. Perhaps that made the shrewd ones feel they enjoyed a sort of privileged status.

Now, should the act go out the window along with certain other New Deal enterprises, the individual workman, who may be a voter on any re-acting constitutional amendment, would know just how it affected him personally, and no mistake.

Furnishes Tax Data

Incidentally, the information going into the hands of the social security board about what each man earns could provide the government first hand data on what might be expected from any income tax that reached down into the lower salary brackets. Much of this information is known now, of course, in a general way. Under the social security act it pays a wage earner to get credit for all he earns as it means more in the retirement envelope. Income taxes, on the other hand, work in the opposite direction.

Three-cent postage expires next June 30 but don't get too hopeful of sending Aunt Susie a Fourth-of-July greeting for a penny less. The post office department does not expect to see the two-cent letter return for some time yet.

Now, should the act go out the win-

—What You Should Know About—

NEW SOCIAL SECURITY LAW

7. Wage Earner Cautioned Against Losing Card. What Assurance Has John Smith That His Account Will Not Be Claimed by Another John Smith?

THE wage earner who applies for a Social Security account is cautioned not to lose the account identification card which he will receive through the same channel by which he filed his application. Benefits at 65 will be based on wage credits on his Social Security account, but loss of the account card is not irreparable; he can get another.

The procedure which makes this assurance possible follows: the worker answers the few simple questions as to name and address, date and place of birth, and father's and mother's full names, signs his application and sends it to his local postoffice by one of five ways, none of which requires postage. The local postoffice sends the application to a "typing center." The typing centers are the 1072 first-class postoffices. There the following things are done:

(1) The initial Social Security Board office record and a duplicate are made.

(2) The account identification card and a duplicate are made.

(3) Original of the account identification card is sent to the employee through the same channel he used in making his application.

(4) The initial Social Security Board office record and the application for account are sent to the Baltimore office of the Social Security Board.

(5) The duplicate Social Security Board office record is filed in the typing center in alphabetical order.

(6) The duplicate account identification card is filed in the typing center in numerical order.

The worker's account will always bear the same number, regardless of whether he is steadily employed.

With 27 pages of "Smiths" in the Manhattan telephone directory alone, workers perhaps wonder what assurance they have that their accounts will not be claimed by other workers of the same name.

However, so efficient and ingenious is the record-keeping system that there is virtually no possibility of confusion arising.

For a situation of such confusion to arise the following improbable conditions would have to exist: two workers with the same christian, middle, and surnames would have to have been born on the same day, month, and year in the same town, of fathers with identical christian, middle, and surnames, and mothers of identical maiden names. The two employees would have to be employed by companies of the same name at the same business address and have made application for accounts on the same date. Finally, their signatures would have to be so nearly alike as to defy examination.

Over Arkansas Lies Greatest Duck Flyway; Preserves Needed

Extermination of Birds Would Be a Local Disaster

Ducks Cling to Old Routes—Once Gone, Restocking Takes Places

Arkansas Government Fails to Act, Says State Planning Board

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Confluence over Arkansas of all lanes in the Mississippi Flyway, bringing millions of wild fowl to this state's woods and lakes, emphasizes, the State Planning Board said Saturday, value of a comprehensive conservation program.

Ducks Plentiful

Hunters who started their shooting season Thanksgiving found more than three times as many ducks as came to Arkansas last year, the state game and fish commission reported. These birds came to this state, the planning board said, down the biggest of four flyways that sweep across the United States.

The board, in a chapter of its annual report released Saturday, described the Mississippi flyway as having an eastern boundary running through southern Ontario, Western Lake Erie, across Ohio and Indiana to the Mississippi valley where it follows closely the river to its mouth. The western boundary merges with the central flyway in Eastern Nebraska, Western Missouri and Arkansas but is marked by a line drawn from Saskatchewan, through Montana, along northwestern Louisiana and southeastern Texas.

"Conservationists now know that birds have a strong attachment for their ancestral flyways and this fact is having an important bearing on the solution of the migratory waterfowl problem," the Planning Board said.

"It indicates that if the birds should be exterminated in any one of the four major flyways now definitely established, it would be many years before that region could be restocked."

Preserves Needed

The state has not provided funds for the purchase of game preserves, those operated in the state resulting from what the board describes as "co-operation of public-spirited landowners who have given the state term leases on their lands." There are 11 such leases varying from 8,320 acres to 36,000 and totaling 202,550 acres.

On each of these refuges is stationed a keeper whose duty it is to police the area under his jurisdiction, undertaking to control the predators, prevent forest fires and, in some instances, to clear and cultivate food patches as required by the abundance of game.

These refuges are located in Clark, Howard, Ashley, Dallas, Washington, Grant, Monroe, Saline, Ouachita and Drew counties.

There are even federal game preserves in the state, five in the Ozark national forest for upland game, and two in eastern Arkansas, lowland sanctuaries for migratory fowl. One of the latter two is on big lake in Mississippi county (9,000 acres) and the other on White river (110,000 acres) in Arkansas, Monroe, Phillips and Desha counties.

The board recommended that study be made of the possibility of utilizing state forests as game preserves and that the "impetus which has been gained in educating the public to the need of carrying on a program of wild-life preservation be maintained and every opportunity seized to further this educational movement."

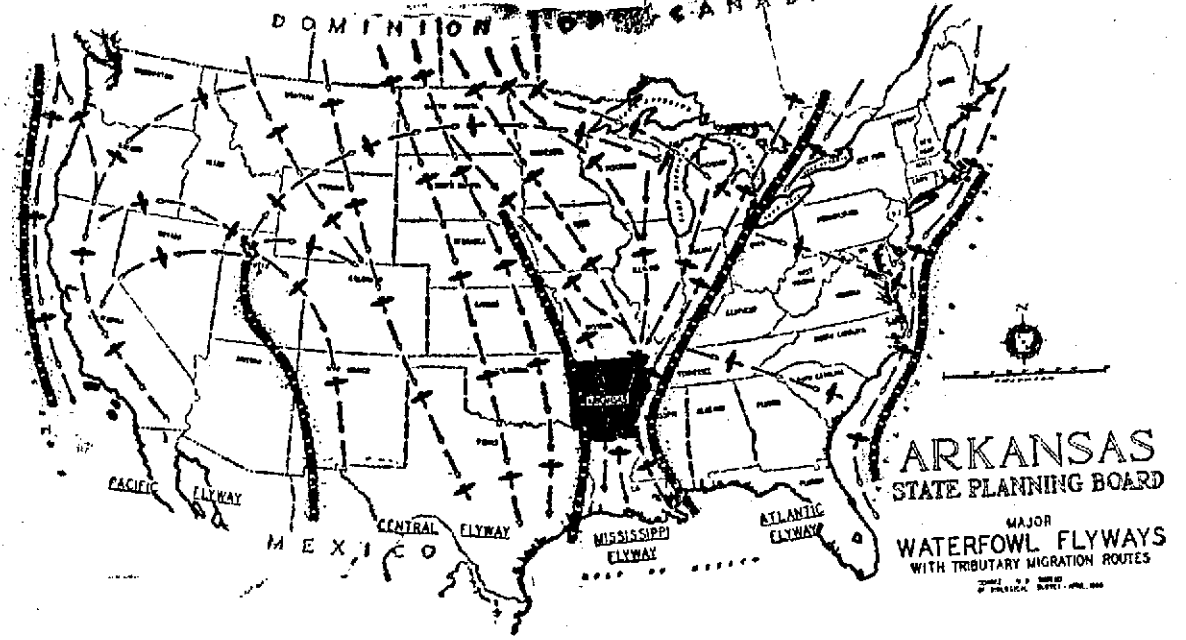

Hitlerites to Use Outdoor 'Talkies'

Pro propaganda Amphitheater, Largest in World, Seats 400,000

BRUNSWICK, Germany.—(AP)—Super-outdoor talkies will sell "second hand participation" in Nazi mass meetings to Germans.

An outdoor moving picture amphitheater with seating accommodation for 400,000, claimed to be the largest in the world, has been completed recently as the first of a series to be erected at numerous places in Germany.

These moving picture places are intended as rally-points where rallies of the Nuremberg party convention, the May Day celebrations and other mass meetings of the Nazi party can be given greater publicity on a super-screen and some hundred thousands more can see and hear the Fuehrer speak.

Winging Southward from Canada down the great Mississippi Flyway, millions of migratory birds come annually to Arkansas. The above map, published by the State Planning Board shows the confluence of six flight lanes upon this state where only a few refuges are now in operation to protect them.

Britain, France to Block Spain's Plea

Appeal to League "Futile," and Might Lead to World War

By The Associated Press

An attempt to keep the Spanish war and its grave international problems out of the League of Nations at least for the present, took shape in the capitals of great Britain and France Saturday.

Informed sources said these powers may try to persuade the Spanish government to withdraw its appeal for council consideration of Italo-German recognition and alleged aid given the Fascist insurgents.

Great Britain and France were represented as believing such League action would endanger international peace as well as being futile.

Battle in Progress

SAINT JEAN DE LUZ, Franco-Spanish border.—(AP)—Severe fighting was reported Saturday on the northern Spanish front, with the government armies claiming successes that endangered three insurgent strongholds on the Bay of Biscay sector.

Fascist sources denied Socialist advances but confirmed reports that a heavy battle raged as the result of a government drive against three insurgent positions.

French reports said the insurgent losses were heavy.

Madrid Beats Them Off

MADRID, Spain.—(AP)—Madrid's defense junta announced Saturday that its troops had routed an insurgent army which attacked Pozuela de Alarcón in an attempt to cut the northwestern railroad to El Escorial.

It also asserted that the international battalion had driven the insurgents back in the south.

Foreign Money in U. S. Carries Peril

In Event of European War, Investments Would Be Liquidated

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON.—Eight or more years ago voices from the government, from banks and from financial exchanges were triumphantly shouting that the boom was not really a boom but was the normal American way. Then in 1929 came the crash.

When President Roosevelt announced he simply was taking a course different from 1929 and earlier, that he was cautioning, not whiping it up.

The obvious suggestion was that if seven billion dollars of American securities owned by foreigners were dumped suddenly upon the American market, it might play havoc.

Reason A Question

What did the market do? It sagged the day after the announcement, and promptly recovered after a week-end of thinking it over. But on the day of the market recovery, Secretary Morgenthau again pointed a finger at the

Labor Federation Re-Elects Green

30-Hour-Week Endorse-Carries Despite Lone Opponent

TAMPA, Fla.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor, unanimously re-elected William Green president for his 13th term, urged legislation for a 30-hour week, referred to its Executive Council demands for endorsement of a constitutional amendment and adjourned its 56th annual convention Friday, marked by efforts to bring peace with the rebel unions headed by John L. Lewis.

For the first time in 12 years, Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, did not nominate Green, who is a member of the miners' union.

The convention selected Denver, Col., for the 1937 meeting, the dates to be announced later.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation for upwards of 40 years, and 15 vice presidents were re-elected.

Green's union status was not mentioned in the election proceedings. The A. F. of L. constitution provides officers must be members of unions in good standing. Green holds several honorary memberships in unions other than those in the rebel group.

Last week the Miners' Executive Board ordered Green to stop associating with the miners' foe.

It has been generally expected that Green would be expelled from the United Mine Workers, although he said such action was "unthinkable."

Green was nominated by George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Mail Clerks and the federation's chief peace-maker.

"Neither the foe within nor foe without" can stop the A. F. of L. from "going forward toward its objectives," Green told the cheering convention.

"I take advantage of this occasion to plead with those who should be here to come back to our home and fight our common fight. My efforts will be directed along that line."

Only William L. Hutchison, president of the Carpenters Union and chairman of the Republican National Committee's Labor Division, expressed opposition to a resolution calling for endorsement of the Black-Connery bill to limit industrial workers' hours to 30 a week.

"If congress can fix a six-hour work day, it can order a 10-hour day," Hutchison said.

60-Day Clemency Based on Illness, Is Incapacitated

Hope Man Has Served 19 Months of a 6-Year Sentence

OTHERS SET FREE

Hutson and Wheaton Furlough After 6 Months of 3-Year Term

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Futrell Saturday granted a 60-day furlough to Charles Crosnoe, of Hope, sentenced to six years in prison for arson in Bradley circuit court May 27, 1935.

The chief executive's order said the action was based on the fact that Crosnoe had served 19 months in prison, that he was physically incapacitated, and needed medical treatment which the prison could not furnish.

Two Previously Furloughed

Convicted with Crosnoe were Jesse Hutson, white, and Chris Wheaton, negro, both of Hope, who were given sentences half as long, in Bradley circuit court in the fall of 1934.

Both were furloughed in the spring of 1935, about the time Crosnoe lost a supreme court appeal and began serving his six-year sentence. Hutson and Wheaton served approximately six months of a three-year term.

$7,662 Proclamation Granted for M'Donald

LITTLE ROCK.—Declaring that expenditure of an abnormal proportion of the 1935-36 capitol maintenance appropriation for payment of invoices for janitor supplies, as shown in an audit of the secretary of state's office by State Comptroller Roy W. Spencer, resulted in certain utility and supply bills not being paid, the 1935-36 fiscal year, Governor Futrell issued a proclamation Friday authorizing Secretary of State E. F. McDonald to spend $7,662.47, more than half the 1935-37 appropriation, to pay utility bills, "minor items of janitor supplies and repairs" during the remainder of this year.

A similar appropriation was issued last August, but was revoked after it was revealed that several Little Rock wholesale merchants were holding unpaid invoices for several thousand dollars of janitor supplies purchased by the secretary of state from Memphis firms.

The Little Rock merchants acquired the invoices by handling the orders as drop shipments on a commission basis. They paid the Memphis firms 90 per cent of the invoice price and billed the state for the full invoice price.

Cross-Eye Needs Early Treatment

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

For a long time any attempt to remedy cross-eyes in children was prevented because people thought cross-eyes were due to fright, shock, prenatal impressions of the mother, or similar superstitious reasons.

A squint or wall-eye may develop from excessive strains placed on the external muscles of the eye by the extra effort in seeing when there is an extreme degree of near-sightedness.

Any straining of the eye or imbalance of the muscles may result in cross-eyes or squint.

Many people believe that children outgrow cross-eyes. This may happen, but, in other instances, the sight of a crossed eye may never develop and frequently the squint or crossed eye becomes worse as time goes on.

Early diagnosis and treatment of this condition are essential for best results. As soon as it is noticed that a child is cross-eyed, a specialist in diseases of the eye should be consulted. He will make a thorough examination, and decide on the proper treatment.

At least half the cases of cross-eyes seem to be due to some hereditary anatomical weakness, judging from records of other cases somewhere in the families of these victims.

Most people have some minor muscle out of balance in their eyes. One muscle will pull harder than the other, and the strong one will overcome the weak one.

When both eyes are open, the stimulus coming from the brain can supply enough extra effort through the weak muscle to keep the eyes lined up. With both eyes open and seeing, we will see double if one eye turns out of line with the other.

In the case of cross-eyes, the person affected may avoid seeing double by using only one eye at a time.

This happens also in persons who have one eye farsighted and the other nearsighted. If the eyes are not balanced suitably with proper glasses, only one eye will be used at a time for seeing. If this is not corrected, the good eye will be used and the weak one will turn.

Sometimes good results are secured merely by prescribing eyeglasses which will tend to hold the two eyes in position.

Children have been found able to tolerate glasses at the age of 15 months. The earlier the glasses are used, the more valuable will be their effect.

The surgical procedure for overcoming cross-eyes is most certain. Proper placement of the eye muscles will tend to bring one eye back into proper relationship to the other eye, and will permit binocular vision.

The operation will not improve the vision, but will prevent the vision from being lost through failure to use the eye successfully.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Strutting Possessions Kills Child's Friendships

A very bad thing for children is, to put it vulgarly, strutting their stuff. To dress a child attractively or get him a nice toy, is one thing. To try to have him always go the neighbor children one better, is another. It is amusing as a means for satisfying his parents' own vanity.

What a trail of unhappiness is left by the little Mary Joneses with their new dresses every other day. Or the Bill Smiths with bigger bicycles every month.

Please don't misunderstand. If Mother delights in turning Mary out like a queen, on a third the amount it takes to dress Bessie Brown across the street, who always looks odd and sometimes dirty, more power to her.

Showing Off Difference
But there is a difference. If Mother is determined to see her offspring in the best-dressed little girl in school, that is a matter of another color. Or if Dad learns that Joe Brown's kid has a new wheel for his birthday, and sends home a world-beater for his own boy that night, just to show Joe that a wheel or two is nothing in his lucky life—that is foolish and common.

The child pays the price.
For a while the rest of the poor deluded youngsters will make tin gods of the girl or fellow who has them licked. Who is to walk beside Mary? Who can hold Bill's books? It is just grand.

"I must be a most remarkable child," Mary thinks. "I'm more popular than anyone."

Or Bill begins to swagger. "When I tell you fellows to do it, do it, see," he says one day. "I'm running this gang."

On one day there is an awakening. No, Mary never wakes up, nor does her neighbor Bill. But the others do.

Jealousy Crops Out
They turn jealous, and why not? Being perpetually outdone gets to be a bore. The girls stop helping with Mary's lessons and no longer fight for her arm. The boys discover that Bill can't fight for himself, or even win a race. He won't do anything he can't win at. So they don't make him president of the club any more. It has come to a show-down, and Mary and Bill must deserve preference on their own account before they get it. Poor Mary and Bill. It was not their fault.

It is best to study conditions of neighborhoods and schools and then compare the children accordingly. They should fit.

Not always is it easy, or even possible, to adjust standard to community, but certain extremes are within anyone's power to control.

Sometimes parents unconsciously make mistakes. They do not seriously look into conditions around them. The ones I have used to illustrate are only occasional. But they do exist, because I know of them.

Don't try to make any child popular by overloading. It can't be done and in the end will probably work against them.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MARCIA CAMPBELL, daughter of wealthy PHILIP CAMPBELL, knows the neighborhood is buzzing over the sudden disappearance of FRANK KENDRICK, whose engagement to Marcia has been announced. Since his disappearance, a shortage in Kendrick's funds has been discovered.

With her friend, HELEN WADSWORTH, and others, Marcia is in a restaurant when there is a hold-up. Marcia loses a ring that was her mother's.

Learning Frank is in Chicago, Marcia goes there to try to persuade him to return and face his financial obligations. Before she reaches him, Frank disappears again.

In Chicago, she encounters BRUCE McDOUGALL, a stranger, who volunteers a slight service. Bruce is also a guest on the plane Marcia takes to return home. A few weeks later, she sees him again. Bruce, an artist, has decided to make his home in the suburbs.

Meanwhile, TONY STELLICCI, restaurant chef, suspects his brother, ARLO, of being involved in the holdup and finds some of the loot in Carlo's home. He returns Marcia's ring.

Marcia stays at the Stellicci home with the public welfare nurse and interrupts a conversation between Tony and Carlo. Tony leaves Marcia alone with Carlo, who keeps the ring on Marcia's hand. Carlo knows that the ring can convict him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI
BOTH Marcia Campbell and Carlo Stellicci, waiting in the shabby kitchen while Tony carried hot water to the nurse attending his father upstairs, knew fear in those silent minutes.

Carlo's was the fear of guilt. Marcia's, the fear that came with sudden realization that an armed and cornered man faced her. There was a fascination in the thought; she looked at him curiously.

The man did not meet her gaze. Lighting a cigarette, he turned and stared out the window, trying to force his slow mind over possible escapes.

Yet all mental maneuvering was in vain; he knew that he was encouraging a futile hope. It flickered and died even as he tried to fan it into reality.

"What are you going to do?" he asked, with a ghostly show of sudden penitence as he sought another avenue.

MARCIA considered him, considered the sick man upstairs and his other son. She thought of the robbery of the Dog Wagon when this man, it was now clear, had somehow assisted the actual bandits, and of the loss of her mother's ring, by odd chance returned. She thought of the stripping of her own home on Christmas afternoon, and of the audacious holdup of the benefit bridge party at which a hundred women of the town had lost all the jewelry they wore.

"What can we do?" she demanded, "but tell the police? You have been robbing the town right and left! You all carry guns; it's a wonder you haven't murdered someone! The trouble is not what to do with you; it's how to protect your father and brother."

Carlo lighted a cigarette, but the pause brought him no help. Then an idea occurred to him.

"I wouldn't be the first guy who made a mistake," he said slowly, his face peculiarly ugly with his thought, "that you didn't put the cops on. Don't you think I know about Kendrick? Don't you think everybody in town is wise by now to what he did? He stole everything he could lay his hands on and then he beat it, but you never called the cops for him!"

Marcia stiffened at the impertinence. And then, as suddenly, she wanted to laugh, hysterically.

But she sobered immediately, angrily, and Carlo as quickly regretted his tactics.

"Look here," he pleaded. "I've got a wife. I've got the old man and Tony. Think of them, not me. I've made my mistakes, yes, but I'm no crook. I just got mixed up with the wrong people."

Marcia had no answer, but the door opened for Tony at the moment. He had put on his overcoat. Buttoning it and pulling gloves from his pocket, he looked at his brother.

"You'd better come along and get this over with," he said at last. "Come along—where?" asked Carlo, forcing his voice to be hard.

"To tell the police who the rest of the gang are."

"You can't do that!" cried Carlo shrilly.

"I can't do anything else," Tony retorted. "I'm not feeling sorry for you. I'm feeling sorry for myself. I'm worrying about keeping it from the old man."

"Then think of him!"

"I am thinking of him! You've given me that to worry about! If I could let you off I'd do it, for his sake. But if I let you off, I'd be letting your whole gang off. I'm a citizen here, if that means anything to you. I've got to turn you in and your gang with you. And then I've got the job of keeping the old man ignorant."

MARCIA was aghast at the drama being enacted before her. Brother and brother! She longed for an easier solution than the stern one which Tony's logical mind, with what suffering she did not know, had fixed upon, but she knew there could be no other.

The thief's forgotten cigarette burned his fingers. He turned to the sink and stamped out the glowing end. Through the window he saw the world—a wide, free world.

"I could warn them off," he promised. "If I told them things were hot out here they wouldn't come back."

His manner swept Marcia's sympathy aside.

"Well, they'd certainly not get religion just because of that," she said impatiently. "They'd simply transfer their work to some other place. How can you expect us to let that happen, for your sake?"

Carlo nodded in miserable acquiescence.

"Let me go up and say hello to the old man," he said. "Tony's right—he mustn't hear of this. Just let me go up and see him. When I come down we can talk over what to do. Whatever I've got coming to me, you can't let my wife and the old man suffer."

He pushed past them and closed the door. Tony and Marcia waited in silence, wretchedly aware of what they had to do.

"There's nothing we can do but tell the police, is there?" asked Tony dully, without hope. "I'll have to be awfully careful the old man doesn't hear."

"I wish I knew of something else, Tony," said Marcia. "It's hard for you and for your brother's wife."

The sound of an automobile starter came from the street. Startled, too late in suspecting, they rushed to the front door.

Carlo was leaving Bobbs Neck.

TONY STELLICCI spent more than an hour in private conference with the police chief that afternoon. Telling all he knew, or guessed, of his brother's activities, he pleaded for secrecy, for his father's sake, as long as possible.

The police immediately visited Carlo's garage; the identity of the two other outside men in the bandit gang, they thought, was plain. But Carlo's employees, too, had fled. Whether Carlo had stopped at the garage or paused somewhere long enough to telephone a warning, the police never knew, but Bobbs Neck had seen the last of the trio.

The police congratulated themselves that this must spell the end of the series of holdups. They continued to wonder about the four actual bandits—the outside talent which, obviously now, had had Carlo and his men for Bobbs Neck pilots. But, lacking any leads from the three who had become fugitives, they didn't think it likely that they would again encounter the four strangers.

With so many people in town able to identify them, and with their assistants no longer available, the quartet, said the police, would raid the town no more.

The police were immensely relieved. The tools of their trade did not include a crystal ball.

"I could warn them off," he promised. "If I told them things

Blytheville Loses to Columbus, 7 to 0

Long String of Victories of Northeast Arkansas Team Is Broken

MEMPHIS.—(AP)—Speaking its 25th successive victory, the Blytheville High School team went down to a 7-0 defeat before Lee High School of Columbus, Miss., in a hard-fought game here Friday night.

The game was advertised as for the high school championship of Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi.

The game's only touchdown was made in the third quarter. It resulted from a long return of a punt by Bruce of Columbus, an end run by Dodson and a pass from Dodson to Campbell that caught the Chicks flat-footed.

Dodson place-kicked for the extra point.

How Touchdown Was Made
To start the third period, Dodson kicked off to the Blytheville 34 and Hutchins fell on the ball. Walker hit the line for four, then gained five on a plunge. The Chicks' captain gained another six for a first down. Mosley passed to Warrington and made 15 yards. Walker went through the line for two yards, landing on the 34-yard stripe. Mosley passed and Bruce intercepted, racing to Blytheville's 32.

Dodson made four around end. He broke through the line for a first down on the 21. He hit the forewall again for no gain. Dodson, after fumbling, grabbed the ball and dashed around right end for a first down on the Chicks' 10.

He then hit through left guard, fumbled, and the Chicks recovered with several players falling on the ball on the seven-yard mark.

With Mosley back, the ball went to Walker, who ran to the nine. Mosley punted out. Bruce took the ball on his 35 and returned to the 15. Dodson, running wide around right end, reached the eight before Mosley and C. Moody checked him. Dodson took the ball, tossed a pass to Louis Campbell. It took the Chicks by surprise and the Generals scored on the play. Bruce held for Dodson's placement kick that brought the extra point.

Chicks Have Tough Luck
It was a heart-breaker for Blytheville to lose. Outside the touchdown play, Columbus made only one other serious threat to score while three times, Blytheville was close to the enemy's goal line only to lose the ball. Twice this was due to fumbles and once to an intercepted pass.

In the first quarter, a long pass by Blytheville, Mosley to Warrington, took the ball to Columbus' 17-yard line. There Hutchins fumbled and Columbus recovered.

In the second quarter the Chicks smashed their way to within a yard of the Columbus goal. On fourth down, Walker made a desperate headlong plunge into the line but the ball flew from his grasp. Bruce of Columbus seized it and got to his 25-yard line before he was hauled down. It seemed that Walker was on the goal line when he fumbled.

Right after Columbus had scored in the third quarter, Blytheville made its last serious threat. A series of line plays and passes took the Chicks to the Columbus 13. There Bruce intercepted Mosley's pass, intended for Warrington, and the threat was ended. The fourth quarter was fought out largely in midfield.

A Book a Day

Book Sets Gullible Mankind Right
Mankind's odd custom of believing so many things that aren't so is examined by Vilhjalmur Stefansson in an entertaining book, "Adventures in Error" (McBride: $3).

Mr. Stefansson points out that some of our most cherished beliefs have no basis in fact. Many of them deal with the Arctic, and Mr. Stefansson is well qualified to discuss them.

The Arctic is the land of eternal snow, tremendous blizzards, and no trees, as everybody knows. Well, says Mr. Stefansson, the average snowfall on the U. S.-Canadian border is far heavier than that of the extreme Arctic. The blizzards of that part of the country are worse than Arctic blizzards. And there are forests with trees 70 feet tall, well inside the Arctic Circle.

Nor is that all. The musk-ox of the far north does not live on lichens, but on flowering plants—which grow in profusion despite the "eternal snow." Most Eskimos have never seen a snow house. On a good summer day it will be as hot in upper Alaska as in Ohio.

Mr. Stefansson has his most fun, however, with the famous bathtub hoax.

You doubtless have seen stories about how the first bathtub in America was built in Cincinnati in 1845, how the White Millard Fillmore's administration, and how Boston had a law barring bathtubs? It's all false.

H. L. Mencken did it. In 1917 he wrote a kidding story, embodying those "facts," in a New York newspaper. To his amazement, everyone believed it. To this day Mencken's spoofing is solemnly accepted as gospel, despite his amused efforts to set people right.

busy adapting and modernizing "The Girl of the Golden West." You'll probably never recognize the story, which is slated for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

Kiddies' Corner:
Those precocious Abbe brats, who are going to do a book on Hollywood, have been tested for roles in "Tom Sawyer."

Patricia Palmer, 10-year-old writer of children's stories, flew here from New York to try to get an author's contract. Studios said they'd put her application on file for a few years.

Quachita Takes 7-0 Win Over Wesleyan

Score in Third Quarter and Stave Off Drive to Beat Illinois

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—(AP)—Quachita College punched over a touchdown in the third quarter Friday and then turned back a belated aerial drive of Illinois Wesleyan to win, 7 to 0.

The Tigers scored on a 13-yard pass from Smith to Arnette, who zig-zagged his way through Illinois tacklers for an additional 15 yards and the tally. Smith's placement kick was good.

Wesleyan made their lone threat in the final minutes, a series of passes carrying them inside the Quachita 20-yard stripe. The gun ended the drive.

Elmo Chaney, 10-pound Tiger fullback, was the offensive and defensive star of the game. He ripped off gain after gain through the Wesleyan line and tackled viciously while backing up the Tiger wall.

The Tigers concluded their season with six victories, one defeat and a tie in games against teams from six states. A crowd of 1,800 saw Friday's battle.

South County Teams Defeat Guernsey in Series of Play Wednesday

The Patmos senior team posed out Guernsey, 12-11, in a hard fought game. Guernsey led until three minutes before the final whistle. Owen, guard, starred both on offense and defense for Patmos.

Middlebrooks and Mayton also showed up well for Patmos. Mayo and Cox played best for Guernsey.

In a surprising victory the Patmos girls team defeated Guernsey, 18 to 15. Guernsey led at the half, but Patmos came back with a strong offense to forge ahead.

Nell Mayton, forward, scored 12 of her team's points, with Dodson second with six points.

The junior team from Patmos turned in a top-sided score over the Guernsey juniors, 22-2. For Patmos Stafford, Hubbard and Reeves made six points apiece.

It was the third consecutive win for the Patmos juniors.

Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland in the Cast Sunday

The long awaited production of "Anthony Adverse," filmed from Hervey Allen's epic novel, which boasts of 3,000,000 readers, comes to the Saenger Sunday with Fredric March in the stellar role and Olivia de Havilland playing opposite him in the feminine lead.

The novel, which took Hervey Allen four years to write, was finally whittled into its finished screen form after more than two years of arduous labor on the part of nearly 3,000 technicians, in addition to more than 2,500 players who portray the many characters seen in the film.

The cast is a tremendous one in size and remarkable for the number of talented players, there being ninety eight speaking parts, with 2,550 bit players and extras appearing. Besides March and Miss de Havilland, some of the more important players include Edmund Gwenn, Claude Rains and Anita Louise.

Europe's Wealthiest Man Built Fortune on Munitions, Ships

same situation. There was conflicting opinion in Washington as to the seriousness of the situation. Why the sudden excitement? The same situation with regard to foreign-owned securities existed several months ago when the federal reserve board put a slight brake on market possibilities by increasing bank reserve requirements.

Is there in sight now a reason for foreign investors suddenly pulling their money out of the American market? Many do not think so. The President did not say so. Those who looked askance at European war possibilities suggested an outbreak of war might, for a time, even increase the flight of investments to the United States. Ultimately, it was generally agreed, a European war would force a liquidation of foreign accounts to raise money to buy munitions here.

One suave official said it appeared to him that besides the "scared" money rushing over here from troubled Europe, a wad of "smart" money had come to profit on the U. S. industrial rise. For every dollar of foreign money put in here during 1934 and 1935, two dollars now could be taken out because of the rise in American security values.

Old Earnings a Factor Not mentioned by the President, but studied closely as it can be, for lack of exact information, is the amount of idle corporation money which, under certain conditions, might be fed into the security markets. The new tax act is forcing distribution of many 1936 earnings but does not touch 1934 and 1935 earnings, which in some corporations were considerable.

That is another wind which might blow into the market without any real check from present federal controls. Just how much of that money is available is unknown.

Holiday Gifts of 1396 Are Reviewed

New Tricks in Luggage, and Jeweled Gadgets for Women

By ADELAID KERR
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK. — (AP) — The Christmas gifts which will deck sparkling trees this year reflect the front page news of 1936 and the modern trend of the times.

King Edward's coming coronation has produced glamorous seed pearl jewelry reminiscent of the old Edwardian epoch and a host of gemmed hair ornaments to tuck into Yuletide packages for women. "Spanish manilla" lace headresses for evening wear and lace-trimmed handkerchiefs show the effect of the rebellion in Spain. A wealth of new tricks in luggage shows the traveling tendencies of a world that has begun to globetrot again. The entire array of selections follows the modern demand for gifts which are both useful and decorative.

Perfumes For Every Gown The jeweled gadgets for women are the most colorful they have been in years. Besides the seed pearl jewelry (beads, ear-rings and clips covered with the tiny pearls), there are clusters of gold flowers centered with turquoise, coral or pearl bead "seeds" to clip to the front of a frock, black enamel bracelets with detachable enamel fan clips at each end and gold starfish pins.

New compacts are made of dull finished metals designed on as clean outlines as the figures in a geometry textbook. Perfumes appear in both clear and colored bottles in scents for all types of gown and mood. One of the newest perfume gadgets is a set of five bottles providing scents for every kind of clothes in the wardrobe from evening costumes to sports togs.

For Traveling The gift luggage and travel accessories seem to anticipate every need. New bottle bags—trim little affairs lined with bottles and jars—have replaced the older and larger "fitted case." Sets of three silk envelopes in graduated sizes are ready to carry the lingerie, stockings and handkerchiefs of the woman traveler and compact manicure sets provide care for her hands.

The same forethought has been given to travel accessory presents for men. Something new and different is a clothes brush with a removable lid top under which is fitted a shaving set. Leather boxes with rubberized linings provide the space for his toilet articles when traveling and another case holds the twin military brushes that have long been a favorite.

Here are other gift suggestions for men: a pipe with perforated swing lid which prevents its going out in bad weather, a pencil with a cigarette lighter in the end, a belt fitted into a box which can later be used as a cigarette box. The usual ties, handkerchiefs, shirts, pajamas, bedroom slippers and wallets are laid out in profusion.

Lots for Children For children the shops offer a wide variety of gifts. Building sets which will construct anything from a barn to a skyscraper, Marionette sets, rainy day play sets and painting outfits, complete with brushes and easel, are among the outstanding offerings. New stationery is stenciled with animals or nicknames, and books have cardboard illustrations which pop up when the book is opened. There are also many new travel books for juvenile readers.

This year's gifts will be enveloped in gay wrappings finished with bright ribbons and colorful accents.

One of the most striking touches for a square package is a tiny shining Christmas tree fashioned of transparent drinking straws of cellulose film. This is the way it is made. Each 150 drinking straws together with the ends even and wind spool wire twice around them, about two inches from one end. Pull the wire tight so that the straws will flare out, then twist the wire, spread the straws evenly and cut into tree form. Hold sealing wax over a flame until it is soft and then touch the ends of the straws with it, leaving little red spots to give color to the tree.

What! No Jeweled Gadgets.

Letters Threaten Edward's Friend

Mrs. Simpson Is Increasingly a Storm Center for the English

LONDON, Eng. — (AP) — Scores of threatening letters addressed to Wallis Warfield Simpson have caused elaborate precautions to be taken to protect King Edward's American friend.

In addition to the patrolmen always on duty before her palatial Cumberland Terrace home, it was learned Thursday that another police officer has been assigned to special duty guarding her against infernal machines.

Such conservational storms have been raised over the question of whether King Edward should marry the vivacious American woman that one report said on some days close to 300 letters arrive at her home.

While many are couched in the friendliest terms, expressing admiration for Mrs. Simpson and the hope that she will be the next queen of England, the majority are intensely antagonistic, a reliable source said.

The publication The Week interpreted recent newspaper editorials on King Edward's relations with his cabinet as a "threat to the position of the monarchy."

The editorials were aimed at the behind-the-scenes efforts of King Edward's closest advisors to have him discontinue his friendship with Mrs. Simpson, the magazine indicated.

Editorials on the subject in the Times of London and the Daily Telegraph, it said, "were the first occasion on which the muttered, whispered threats of the old guard as to what they would do in certain eventualities" have begun to reach the printed page.

The editorials mentioned were concerned mainly with criticism of the London Daily Mail for drawing an editorial contrast between the king's energy and failure of the cabinet to relieve "depressed" sections of Wales.

In 1829 schools and colleges were opposed in North Carolina. A writer for a Raleigh newspaper expressed the reason: "College learned persons give themselves great airs, are proud, and the fewer of them we have amongst us the better."

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

TRISTAN AND ISOLDE

THE great German composer, Richard Wagner, wrote what is considered his greatest masterpiece in "Tristan and Isolde." It is the story of a Cornish knight who, through a love potion, became enamored of the Princess of Ireland, despite the fact that she was betrothed to the Cornish King Mark.

When King Mark finds Tristan and Isolde embracing each other, the king's courtier slaps Tristan. Carried to his castle, Tristan is dying of the wound, and calls for Isolde, who alone can cure him. But just as she arrives, he dies in her arms.

Isolde, grieving over Tristan's death, sings the beautiful "Liebestod," or Death of Love, and falls dead beside him.

The opera, first presented in 1865, is the subject of one of the nine stamps by which Germany honored Wagner in 1933.

HAW, LADS! HOW IS THIS FOR A MASTER STROKE TO EVADE THAT MUCKLE HEAD WHO IS LYING IN WAIT TO TAG ME WITH A SUMMONS—UMF-FUF—UFF—TWILL TAKE A NIMBLE WIT TO OUT-DO A HOOPLE'S INGENUITY!

WHY DICK BEHIND TH' SANTA CLAUS BRUSH? JUST WALK OUT OF YOUR CAGE! HE'LL BE LOOKING INTO TREES, TO CATCH A SQUIRREL LIKE YOU

IF HE WANTS TO DO A SNEAK, TO SEE HIS LAWYER, HE COULD FASTEN A BASKET ONTO HIS EQUATOR AND DO A BRODIE OUT OF TH' ATTIC WINDOW, DISGUISED AS A BLIMP!

THE BOYS ALWAYS ARE SO HELPFUL

DID YOU SEE THAT? OL' BADGE SWUNG AN AWFUL HAY-MAKER RIGHT ON THAT GUY'S BUGLE! WHAT TH—

BADGE'S GOT A RADIO HIDE BACK THERE, SO HE CAN GET TH' FOOT BALL GAMES, AN' IT PROBABLY ATTRACTED THAT GUY—AND ANYTHING THAT ATTRACTS A BUNCH OF WORKMEN ATTRACTS A BOSS, AN' SO—WELL THAT'S A CURE

NO, THERE'S NO CURE! HE'LL BE MAD AND GET ONE, HIMSELF! ANOTHER GUY'LL GET ONE, AN' PRETTY SOON, TH' BOSSES WILL BE FALLIN' OVER THEM, AN' THER WON'T BE ANYMORE.

WHO'S GOING TO BE AT THE BANQUET TONIGHT, SON?

ALL THE MEMBERS OF THE TEAM....IT'S OUR ANNUAL AFFAIR! PULL THAT KNOT GOOD AND TIGHT, MOM!

IF YOU HAVE A FRUIT COCKTAIL FIRST, YOU USE A SPOON—BUT IF A SEAFOOD COCKTAIL IS FIRST, YOU USE A SMALL FORK.

I'M SURE GLAD I HAVE MY LEFT ARM IN A SLING...THAT'LL LEAVE ME ONLY ONE HAND WITH WHICH TO MAKE MISTAKES.

DOES YOUR ARM STILL BOTHER YOU?

IT'S KINDA SORE, MOM, BUT IT SHOULD BE.... IT GOT QUITE A TWIST WHEN I MADE THAT LAST TACKLE!

SAY, MOM, AT A FANCY DINNER, WHAT FORK DO YOU USE FIRST?

MAYBE YOU WON'T USE A FORK FIRST—

LEW, WHAT ON EARTH? OH! IT'S POOR FENLIN!

YES! SEEK CLUE TO EXPLOSION.

WAIT! THE ENVELOPE

TO POSTERITY: WHAT I HAVE DONE HAS BEEN TO THE ACT OF COUNTRY, IT IS THE ACT OF A BATTLE-HUMANITARIAN, WHO, BY THE SACRIFICE OF A FEW, SEEKS TO SAVE MILLIONS. IT IS ONLY FITTING THAT I WHO HAVE DESIGNED THESE MIGHTY ENGINES, AGAINST THEM, SHOULD ALSO DESTROY THEM. I BESEECH YOU TO DESTROY ALSO, THE PLANS OF THIS DEATH-DEALING MONSTER.

SILENTLY, WHILE MYRA AND JACK WATCH, WITH MISTY EYES, LEW WEN TEARS THE MOBILFORT PLANS TO SHREDS

JACK! LOOK AT FENLIN'S FACE! WHY THAT'S THE CLOSEST IT'S EVER COME TO REAL EXPRESSION!
